Kalynda Schuliga is a local photographer who has grown up on Wadawurrung Country and is currently living on the Surfcoast. Kalynda's passion for women's health & being a proud advocate for home birth led her to study to be a doula, she combined her love for photography with this passion and is now a birth photographer. She was always fascinated with film photography & shoots on both 35mm & medium format cameras she also incorporates some digital into her work flow. Kalynda studied fine arts and photography at RMIT for two years combining her knowledge in this field with her birth and postpartum education which focused heavily on innate traditions & ancient healing modalities. She is lit up by documenting all aspects of family life, mothers birthing their children, mothers tending to life, families together in tender embrace, loss of loved ones and everything in between. "Family work can be felt as the mundane to some but for me the magic of creation & the heartbeat of humanity lives here." Kalynda's experience of becoming a mother has informed every aspect of her work and is the driving force behind her art: "If it was not for my daughter I don't think I would be here making the work I make today."
